Jenny and I got back from our vacation this week. We were able to do a farm to table event in South Carolina and got a few good ideas. We also visited road side markets and enjoyed a lot of fresh seafood. I love walking the beach, reading and thinking.

We came back with best of intentions to hit the ground running, but the weather has been just awful. I hope it turns warm this week and doesn't turn into a cold spring...

The roof project continues. We are repurposing insulation to put into the ceiling of the parlor building. We need to wash and cut about 700 pieces to make that a reality. That is a lot of work.

Hannah is planting flats of starts and has filled the first greenhouse with early plantings. We will move the planting to the coverall greenhouse this week and are excited to have a great space to start greens, peppers and tomatoes in the next couple weeks.

We are cleaning and prepping the laying hen area for our new pullets that will be delivered during the eclipse. I miss listening to the hens. One of the best sounds on the farm.

We have sprouting kale bunches from the coverall greenhouse listed for this week. We also have Ellen's geese listed if you would like one for Easter. Another option is an Easter Ham! Hams are uncured.

Happy Easter!
